PRESIDENT OF SOKA GAKKAI INTERNATIONAL VISITS CHINESE UNIVERSITY

Mr Daisaku Ikeda, a renowned cultural and religious leader and recipient of the United Nations Peace Award, was in Hongkong to deliver an address at the Chinese University on January 30 as the University's Distinguished Visiting Professor. The reception ceremony was attended by Japan's Consul-General in Hongkong, a delegation from Japan, and staff and students of the Chinese University. In his address, Mr Ikeda stressed the importance of humanism, explaining how ideologies could best be validated through human experience, and urging that all should exercise their mental faculties to the full and face reality squarely when making important judgements in life.

Mr Ikeda is President of Soka Gakkai International (SGI), one of the most dynamic and fast-growing Buddhist movements in the world. Since the 1960s, he has devoted himself to promoting peace and nuclear disarmament.

Realising the importance of education for world peace, Mr Ikeda founded Soka University in 1971 which now has an extensive exchange programme with some 40 universities over the world. The Chinese University of Hong Kong was the first institution to establish academic linkages with Soka University in 1975. To date, the two universities have exchanged over 200 students and teachers.
