Chinese University holds admission talks for JUPAS applicants

The Chinese University of Hong Kong is holding admission talks on its 39 full-time undergraduate programmes on Saturday (May 25) for students applying via the JUPAS (Joint University Programmes Admissions System).

For the first time, the JUPAS is allowing applicants to re-prioritize their 20 programme choices after knowing their Advanced Level Examination results in July. "Those students who wish to change their choices should take into account not only their own performance at the examinations, but also the different entry requirements of programmes as well as their own interest and aptitude," said Mr. S. W. Lee, Deputy Registrar of the University.

"Our teachers will give them thorough briefings on the entry requirements, the course structures, and career prospects, and try to answer questions which they may have during the admission talks," he added.

Conducted by the Faculties of Arts, Business Administration, Education, Engineering, Medicine, Science and Social Science -- the talks are taking place from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at various venues on the University's campus in Shatin. There will also be video shows and exhibitions, and some departments will open their laboratories and facilities to visitors. A free special shuttle bus service will run between the University Train Station and the central campus on that day.
