

新聞稿 PRESS RELEASE

香港中文大學新鋪設全天候跑道之大學運動場經命名為「夏鼎基爵士運動場」，以表揚前布政司夏鼎基爵士自一九六二年歷任本港公職垂廿三載對社會之卓越貢獻。

上週四（一月十五日）在該校舉行之一項簡單儀式中，夏鼎基爵士之公子 Mr Francis Haddon-Cave 應邀為該運動場主持揭幕禮。

是日觀禮來賓達七十人，其中包括支持中大設立夏鼎基爵士基金之社會熱心人士及機構代表。彼等於一九八五年夏爵士榮休時，慷慨捐出二百六十餘萬港元設立基金，藉以表達對夏爵士敬佩之忱。

有關基金所得利息用以資助中大各項研究計劃，按夏鼎基爵士意願，其中部份收益用作老年病學之研究。

The Chinese University of Hong Kong has named its newly surfaced sports field with an all weather track the "Sir Philip Haddon-Cave Sports Field" as a tribute to Hong Kong's former Chief Secretary, Sir Philip, for his more than two decades of distinguished public service since 1962.

At a brief ceremony which took place in the University last week (January 15), Mr Francis Haddon-Cave, son of Sir Philip, unveiled the commemorative plaque for the sports field.

Among the 70 guests attending the ceremony were donors of the Sir Philip Haddon-Cave Fund for Research which was set up in the University on Sir Philip's retirement in 1985. They were all well-wishing individuals and corporations in the community who wished to show their respect and admiration to an outstanding man for his most dedicated service to Hong Kong.

The principal of the Fund which has today exceeded $2.6 million is being endowed and the income will be used for research purposes in the University. Part of it is to support work in geriatric medicine in compliance with Sir Philip's wish.
