First batch of home-grown pharmacist graduates from Chinese University

The Chinese University of Hong Kong announces today that a total of 2,157 full-time undergraduate students have completed their programmes of studies this summer and are graduating from the University.

Among the seven faculties, the Faculty of Social Science has produced the largest batch of 569 graduates, followed by Faculty of Business Administration (377 graduates), Faculty of Science (369 graduates), Faculty of Arts (339 graduates), Faculty of Engineering (273 graduates) and Faculty of Medicine (230 graduates).

This year also sees the first batch of 31 students graduating from the Department of Pharmacy. These graduates are also Hong Kong's first group of home-grown prospective pharmacists who have completed their undergraduate programme of studies locally. They are now undergoing professional internship training in major Hospital Authority Pharmacy Departments, and a few are receiving additional training in a local pharmaceutical company.
